

The Third International Conference of the Chinese and American Forum on Legal Information and Law Libraries (CAFLI)
Shanghai, China, June 10 – 12, 2013

This third international conference is sponsored by the Chinese and American Forum on Legal Information and Law Libraries (CAFLI), a non-profit U.S. organization, the American Association of Law Libraries (AALL), and the International Association of Law Libraries (IALL) in conjunction with a similar organization in China represented by the China University of Political Science and Law (CUPL); East China University of Political Science and Law (ECUPL); Tongji University School of Law; and other prominent law schools in China. The host for this conference is ECUPL, located in Shanghai, China.

The Conference will be an opportunity for law librarians and legal information professionals to share experiences and exchange views about legal information access and development and law library management in both the United States and China. The theme of the conference is Collaboration: Information, Access, and Partnership. Topics will include public access to legal information, digital technology in libraries, internationalization of shared legal information, and more.

For more information on previous CAFLI conferences in Beijing (2009) and Philadelphia (2011), or for more information about CAFLI, visit: <http://caflinet.org/>.
